

Derek Brien

Derek Brien is co-founder and Executive Director of the Pacific Institute of Public Policy (PiPP). Derek has provided policy and strategic planning advice to governments in Australia, Britain and the Pacific over the last fifteen years. Prior to establishing PiPP, he ran his own consultancy practice focusing on strategic communications, stakeholder engagement and the reform of government systems. In his current role, Derek has led a range of research communications initiatives to stimulate and support policy debate in Pacific island countries on issues relating to trade, urban management, infrastructure, political systems, the aid relationship and climate change. Derek is regularly called upon to provide advice to governments, development agencies and academia, and is a regular commentator on public policy issues in the Pacific. He is currently engaged as an advisor to the Government of Timor-Leste and g7+ on the Post-2015 Development Agenda.
